About NTIS

The National Technical Information Service (NTIS) is a self-supporting agency of the U.S. Department of Commerce and the largest single source for public access to Federally produced information.

NTIS was established as a Publications Board by President Harry S Truman in 1945. Its original function was to review World War II scientific and technical documents and determine what could be released to the public.

Eventually, Congress ordered the Department of Commerce to operate a national clearinghouse to collect and distribute scientific, technical, and engineering information. In 1970, the national clearinghouse was re-established as NTIS.

NTIS announces summaries of more than 70,000 completed and 120,000 ongoing U.S. and foreign Government-sponsored R&D and engineering activities each year.

NTIS is sustained by its sales revenue. NTIS salaries, marketing, postage, and all other operating costs are paid for from this revenue.

What does NTIS information cover?

The NTIS collection of 2 million works covers current technologies, business and management studies, foreign and domestic trade, environment and energy, health and the social sciences, translations of foreign reports, general statistics, and hundreds of other areas. The material is not limited to printed reports and documents. NTIS also provides information in electronic formats including 2,050 datafiles on tape, 860 datafiles on diskette, 1,880 software programs on tape, 370 software programs on diskette, and 23 titles on CD-ROM.

All NTIS materials are permanently available. When Government agencies and their contractors forward reports and other items to NTIS, these items are entered into the NTIS computerized bibliographic database and become part of the NTIS archive. The database is available to the public through a number of commercial online vendors.

Where does the information come from?

From Worldwide Sources

More than 200 Federal agencies contribute to the NTIS collection, including the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, the Environmental Protection Agency, the National Institute of Standards and Technology, the National Institutes of Health, the Departments of Agriculture, Defense, Energy, Commerce, Interior, Health and Human Services, and Transportation.

NTIS adds approximately 70,000 new works to its collection annually. Coverage is worldwide; nearly one-third of new additions to the collection now come from foreign sources, including Japan, East Europe, and Russia.

From Joint Ventures

Legislation passed in 1988 authorized NTIS to work with private industry to build strategic alliances through the use of contracts or cooperative agreements with the private sector, individuals, firms, or other organizations. As a result of the legislation, NTIS established its Joint Ventures Program. This unique program allows NTIS to enter into joint ventures with businesses to create new information products from Government-produced data and software. In addition, NTIS is looking for partnerships to open new channels of sales and distribution for Federal information products. For more information about Joint Ventures with NTIS, call 703/487-4674.
